SKETCH 8

This is from a collaborative studio session I did with a classmate. Here we each chose an element that we wanted to explore further, and we took turns experimenting with it. Here I am working with a Roland TR-6 drum machine, that we collaboratively learned how to use. This footage is the most interesting of my experiments, and it consists of me launching the tracks live, while improvisationally programming each track. In this experiment I learned that I am very interested in using drum machines, and I enjoy the composition that results from sequencing and launching tracks live improvisationally.
